Men Killed or Maimed in War

British Peer Asks Information as to Measures Taken For Safety of Balkan Expedition

London, Nov. 8.—Debate on the conduct of the war and the censorship was resumed in the house of lords late today. Earl Loreburn, former high chancellor, brought up the subject, declaring that he took this action owing to his belief that the Marquis of Lansdowne, the minister without portfolio, had not made adequate reply to the arguments of Viscount Morley.

Earl Loreburn spoke of what he termed the misadventures of Cradock's squadron the Dardanelles operations and the Balkan expedition. The speaker said he had been told two months ago that fifteen million men had been killed or disabled for life and that multitudes had been added to this number since and that if the conflict continued indefinitely, revolution or anarchy might follow in Europe.

"Unless the collective common sense of mankind prevails before the worst comes," added Earl Loreburn, "the great continent of Europe will be little better than a wilderness peopled by old men, women and children."

He declared it was no exaggeration to say that if the war continued indefinitely revolution or anarchy may follow.

Earl Loreburn, who was one of the radical stalwarts who criticized the South African war, today oddly enough found himself supported by Viscount Milner, former high commissioner for South Africa, who was one of those largely responsible for the South African war. Viscount Milner, however, largely confined himself to a criticism of the censorship. He declared that the news had been doctored in an optimistic sense, and also denounced the government for not going sooner to the assistance of Serbia.

Earl Loreburn asked whether the landing at Saloniki had been made with the approval of the naval and military authorities of the entente allies, whether they were satisfied with the supplies of men and money and if the communication had been properly safeguarded. He asked these questions, he said, because there was an uneasy feeling that there had not been sufficient provision.

In saying that he had been informed that 15,000,000 men already had been killed or disabled in the war, Earl Loreburn added that this was what was meant by a war of attrition and that while the war continued, the government should do its best to prevent irreparable mistakes.

Federation Extends Courtesies to Visitors But Denies Them Voting Power

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—B. Suzuki and S. Yoshimatsu, representatives of organized labor in Japan, were refused seats as fraternal delegates by the American Federation of Labor, which began today its thirty-fifth annual convention. This action was based upon a report of the committee on credentials, which recommended that the Japanese be extended the courtesies of the convention.

Suzuki and Yoshimatsu were seated as delegates to the California Federation of Labor at its annual meeting in Santa Rosa several weeks ago.

In explanation of why the two Japanese were not allowed seats on the floor, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, said it was impossible to grant this privilege, as they would have voting power in the convention, a right allowed only representatives of affiliated organizations.

Outlining the concepts of the federation, President Gompers in his address touched upon the employment of women and children in shops where in many instances, they worked long hours and were underpaid. "We want to take the women and children of this country out of the workshop," he said. "The perpetuity of the nation depends upon the women of the country and we want to do all that we can for them."

On the question of immigration President Gompers said that the policy of the federation would be to continue to assimilate the foreigner as they came.

Governor Johnson, welcoming the delegates, among whom there were about fifty women, said that the concepts of labor as outlined by President Gompers are the precepts of government in California.

"It is more appropriate that California should greet labor in convention than any other state," he said.

Why We Count in Tens.

Because we have ten fingers we count in tens; therefore, for ease and quickness of reckoning all our measurements should be in tens. Then, in order to reckon, we should only have to use the very simple method which we learn when we study decimals.

Every fifth roll is Certain-teed

The General says:—

"There are different ways of speculating—and one of the easiest ways to burn up your money is to buy an unknown grade, a 'just as good' grade on a fake-guaranteed grade of roofing."

Certain-teed

A man without money or responsibility can "guarantee" anything without running any financial risk—but when the maker of Certain-teed Roofing puts his big manufacturing plants behind his guarantee, it means something to you as the purchaser of roofing—that's why you should insist on Certain-teed.
